Q: Oracle - unique index without primary key I'm having a problem with Oracle. I have two non-unique indexes on one table. Is it possible to create a unique index without the primary key? A: In Oracle, there is no way to add a unique index that is not primary key for a table. You can create unique index with or without the primary key column. Click Here A: Oracle doesn't support unique indexes without the primary key. You can have an index with a unique constraint though: CREATE TABLE Table_Name (id NUMBER NOT NULL, unique_col UNIQUE CONSTRAINT Table_Unique_Constraint REFERENCES Table_Name (id)); A: There is no way to do what you want in Oracle. However there is no reason to do it as it will not be used for anything. If you have the time and money to have a unique index on your primary key, then create it. You'll end up having less problems than having it not there. Review: Marked Men, a Thriller, by Neil McMahon Marked Men, a thriller by Neil McMahon is featured on my monthly 'Reckless Reads'.
