Please let me know if you can help me with this. A: you can just use `?` at the start of the expression to do a regex match that any character (or group of characters) with 'some' number of characters. For example `$msg =~ m/^\s.{3,4}\s*/` will find strings that have 3 to 4 whitespace characters at the start. Or you can wrap your substitution expression to replace with spaces `$msg =~ s/^\s*.{3,4}\s*/ $1/s`; In addition your REGEX requires `$1` to match the value from the first capture group. As to your first question about the `-e` flag for Perl, it will ensure that any error messages are output. You can easily turn it off with `use strict`; at the top of your script. A: Here is my solution:

#!/usr/bin/perl use warnings; use strict; use Getopt::Long; my %options = ( "help" => \ $help, "att1" => \ $at1, "att2" => \ $at2, "at3" => \ $at3, "at4" => \ $at4, "at5" => \ $at5, "at6" => \ $at6, "HDR" => \ $hdr, "at7" => \ $at7, "H264" => \ $h264, ); my $options = \%options; GetOptions( $options ); sub usage { print
