In this book, Enrique Pichón-Riviere adheres to a scientific methodology in which he explains several aspects of the creative process: the ability to identify the new, the vision, the invention, the ideation, the typology of objects, the idea of desire, and finally, the role of the individual in the whole creative process.

Pichón-Riviere had a difficult childhood, since his father died when he was only a baby. He was a victim of the process of his mother's husband, who turned against him after his wife discovered that he had an affair. From an early age, Pichón-Riviere felt great pain for his childhood. Enrique Pichón-Riviere, born in Leon, in the Central Region of Spain, on 10

September 1928, was raised in a poor family, and was left an orphan when he was only three years old. As a man of very early determination, which led him to become a doctor without first completing university, he soon became an author and professor at the Faculty of Art in Valencia, where he taught many specialties, including the history of art. He moved to Madrid in 1967, where he became head of the Department of Art at the. Pichón-Riviere studied at the University of Salamanca with doctor Ramon Cabanes, and in 1954 obtained a degree in literature with a thesis on the Dante. With the help of Luis Dubberley, he published his first book, "The Invisible Hand" (El Mano Invisible), in 1960. In 1965, he published "Ceremony of Getting Up and Going to Work" (Los Ceremonios de Llorar y Salir del Cielo). In 1968, he published his second book, "Portrait and Suspect" (El 3da54e8ca3
