How to download content from YouTube on Windows But now I'm surprised with this unusual video, which is a link to a YouTube video: How can I know the URL of this video if I want to download it? Is it possible to browse and download YouTube videos through an MP3 player like Spotify? A: YouTube directly allows downloading videos from its servers, as can be seen in its help page (see How do I download videos from YouTube?) and also in its media player (see How to view videos and download YouTube content). There was also a news report on this. The fact that you can download videos from YouTube is only officially supported on the video-specific Web apps. On YouTube's normal website, you can only watch the video without an active download, and only after you've watched the video. In this case, the YouTube video was posted on YouTube's Page and not YouTube's Live Channel. For videos posted in a Page, you can download the video as it was posted on that Page. Google Page Embed form If you want to download the video once it is up on YouTube's Live Channel, you cannot do so directly from the YouTube website. Instead, you would need to use a Media Player, such as VLC, and start watching. At this point, you would be able to go to File > Save Video As. YouTube's normal website (aka web or desktop view, not mobile view) cannot go directly to this video. You would need to download the video to one of your computers and open it in a Media Player (VLC works well), and then open the video with VLC.
