1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a tire air pressure detecting apparatus for detecting the air pressure of a tire. More specifically, this invention relates to a tire air pressure detecting apparatus for automatically maintaining the air pressure of a tire at a proper value. 2. Description of the Related Art In the past, there has been a well-known tire air pressure detecting apparatus of this kind which is provided at an air inlet port of a tire for detecting the air pressure of the tire on the basis of the pressure of air supplied to the tire. This tire air pressure detecting apparatus is provided with a valve rubber assembly having a valve rubber disposed on an outlet side of a valve body for opening and closing the air inlet port; and a pressure sensor disposed on an inlet side of the valve rubber assembly for detecting the air pressure of air flowing through the valve rubber assembly. However, for a vehicle having a plurality of air inlet ports for supplying air to a plurality of tires, there is a case where the air pressures of the tires are different from one another when a tire is detached from one of the tires. In such case, the valve rubber assembly is often damaged, which may possibly lead to a trouble in the operation of the tire air pressure detecting apparatus. The purpose of the present invention is to provide a tire air pressure detecting apparatus having a valve rubber assembly prevented from being damaged even when the air pressure of a tire is different from that of the other tires. According to the present invention, there is provided a tire air pressure detecting apparatus of a vehicle, which apparatus comprises a vehicle body structure supporting a wheel of the vehicle and a tire provided on the wheel, air inlet ports formed in a tire in order to supply air to the tire and an air inlet passage for supplying air to a tire pressure detecting apparatus. The tire pressure detecting apparatus comprises a valve rubber assembly provided on an air outlet side of the air inlet port; and a pressure sensor disposed on an air inlet side of the valve rubber assembly, the pressure sensor having at least one air inlet hole formed on a diaphragm plate which is adapted to be deformed due to the pressure of air. According to the present invention, the diaphragm plate is disposed in such a way as to come into contact with a valve body when the diaphragm plate is deformed. Further, at least one air inlet hole is formed on the diaphragm plate. In the present tire air

According to a new poll by Public Policy Polling (PPP), released this morning, 52 percent of U.S. voters can't name a single member of Congress and 66 percent of voters say they're unaware of the debt limit debate. "When PPP talked to voters about the debt limit last month, just 7 percent said they could name a person in Washington who was most responsible for working with House and Senate leaders to push through a deal before the government ran out of money," PPP CEO Mark Blumenthal said in a statement. ADVERTISEMENT "One month later, that number is down to 5 percent," Blumenthal continued. "As a result, a staggering 66 percent of voters can't name a member of Congress who is responsible for the deadline, and more than half (52 percent) say they're not even aware that we're at the point where we could, as a practical matter, run out of money in our federal budget." Although 72 percent of voters think the debt limit is a problem, 79 percent of voters believe political leaders should focus on enacting spending cuts rather than raising the debt limit. "As long as politicians can't figure out a way to come to a workable agreement, I don't really see a need to raise the limit," 26 percent of voters said. Voters are no friend
