One of the main advantages of the ownership is that it can be applied to all files without needing a separate utility. Review: Ownership is a useful Windows application that can be used by novice users to enhance the security of their data. It can also be used by more experienced users to get back to the proper power of ownership. Ownership Ownership is a simple utility that allows you to assign ownership to any type of files on your system. This is a very powerful tool that allows you to make full use of all the features NTFS offers when it comes to security. Ownership allows you to reassign ownership of files and folders in the folders and subfolders you wish to modify and the changes will stay in place even if you use a different operating system. Ownership works by a simple and easy to understand interface that allows you to choose any file and assign ownership, making the whole process a breeze. Although it may seem like a simple task, it is a bit more complicated than the default Windows explorer as the changes that can be made are not the same. If you are a novice, you can use this simple utility to enhance the security of your files and folders. You can also set the owner to a specific person that you are more familiar with, as it can be a really handy thing to do. Besides, is no one else who can really appreciate the beauty of your files. Ownership is very easy to use, as there is no registry editing and the only thing you need to do is change the ownership of the file, either by choosing it from the File Name menu or by dragging the file to the desired location. Once you change the ownership, you will notice the changes immediately and all other users will be able to edit the file and folders as well. This may sound like a very easy and user-friendly application, but there is more to ownership than just the changes you see in your computer. In fact, using ownership you can modify the properties of the file. This is done by simply right-clicking on the file and choosing the properties tab, as there you will find the options to change the properties of your files. You will notice that the changes will affect all of your users, as they are not individual and separate. Ownership also allows you to assign ownership to a group of files as well as a specific folder. You can also assign ownership to only one of the users as well as an administrator, as you can choose the desired user from the menu and press “Assign File Ownership”. Ownership also allows you to assign ownership to multiple files and folders at once. Although this does not affect the user interface of the application, it can be really handy when you want to change ownership
