Field of the Invention This invention relates to apparatus for coating a continuously moving web-like substrate material with a liquid coating material. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the formation of reflective paper, a base paper is coated with a thermally fixable coating composition which is generally an emulsion or dispersion of a wax in a liquid vehicle such as water or a petroleum based oil. The coated base paper is generally exposed to a high temperature, that is, above about 300.degree. F., and, accordingly, the coating composition which is thermally fixable is generally cured or dried to fix the coating composition on the base paper. Since this coating can be applied only once, it is very desirable to reduce the application cost as far as possible. Accordingly, one current method of applying the coating is to tumble the coated base paper such that the coated base paper receives a sufficiently hot, that is, above about 400.degree. F., air flow. Thus, the coating composition dries or cures in a very short period of time, that is, on the order of a minute or two, and as a result, the paper is prepared quickly with a minimum number of passes. This method is particularly successful for applying coating compositions having a wax content of above about 5%. However, it has been discovered that the tumbling operation is not suitable for completely removing
