KEYMACRO works exactly as it says it does. It will sit in the corner of the screen and collect any keystrokes, whether they be your mouse clicks or any other keystrokes. By combining the functionality of the mouse with keystrokes, you can have a program that will help you perform a task by simply pointing at it and pressing a button. This feature allows you to type text faster by simply "typing" the commands on the screen instead of moving your hands to the keyboard and tapping it.

KEYMACRO is a freeware application that has been available for a few years. However, it is currently being developed to be updated to the newest versions of Windows and compatible applications.

KEYMACRO is a great program for people who type and have text-based commands. If you are used to having a "right-click" or a "control-click" or a "alt-click" function you are going to really enjoy KEYMACRO. What makes KEYMACRO great? KEYMACRO is a mouse-controlled command line. It collects keystrokes and places them at the cursor location. No mouse movement is required to use the program. KEYMACRO uses keystroke commands to trigger actions. Many commands in KEYMACRO are right-click or control-click functions, but the program allows you to define any keystrokes you desire.

KEYMACRO is great at collecting keystrokes and is very easy to use.

However, it does not store the keystrokes until you tell it to. The main screen of the program displays the keystrokes that you have already entered. The most popular keystrokes are stored in the "HISTORY" file. The keys stored in the HISTORY file are the most common commands used by different applications. You can have different "KEYMACRO Files" for different applications, if you wish. I used it for a few years and my old keyboard was bad so I bought a new keyboard. When I tried to use my old keyboard, everything that I had stored in my HISTORY file was gone. I went to different internet forums and asked for help and nobody would help me. I had to get another keyboard. After I downloaded the new version of KEYMACRO I was able to store commands in my HISTORY file. KEYMACRO is pretty easy to use and it works very well. KEYMACRO can perform many functions depending on the application that you are using. It is

Video Downloader is a browser extension that provides a more comfortable method of downloading Internet videos. It's compatible with the classic trinity: IE, Firefox and Chrome. Provides you with a convenient way to download clips The extra comfort that you'll find in Video Downloader comes from the fact that you'll never ever have to leave the browser in order to save your favorite clips locally. The downloads are initiated from your browser of choice, by the press of a button. It's recommended that during its installation, you close all of the browser windows that you might have running in order to avoid deployment issues. In just a couple of seconds, you'll be ready to experiment with it, as it installs very quickly. Simple and straightforward functionality Simply open the browser, navigate to the video you wish to download, then look for the small toolbar that it implements above each clip. The 'Download' label should appear inside a little box that allows you to initiate the saving of the video. Once you've done this, you should be redirected to a separate window where you can manage your downloads. The source files are listed together with details such as size, status (paused, running), rate (kb/s), remaining time and source path. The downloads can be paused and resumed at any time or edited for details such as file name and the output folder to which the clip will be exported. Obviously, download times depend on the file size and your Internet Connection, so if you're experiencing slowdowns, it might be an issue on your side. A useful alternative for downloading videos from various sites Overall, Video Downloader comes across as a more comfortable approach to grabbing online clips, although its arrays of features cannot compete with that of a complex video download manager. However, it's ease of use and low impact on the system resources are to be appreciated. You know when it comes to beautiful HD pics that you need to store them on your computer. That is one thing but the thing is that you also need to be able to store and transport them using all means and i suggest that you start with Google Drive storage. You can use it on any device. So as you already know there are so many type of storage in the internet. But if you want to use Google Drive then you need to install Google Chrome browser on your device because Google Drive only work with Google chrome browser and not with other browser
