Microsoft Slideshow Wizard - file sharing software reviews, comparisons and ratings - CNET Slideshow Wizard - Free Slideshow Maker - cheats.de The developers of Slideshow Wizard have provided a feature called "Video Slideshow" which allows you to insert video clips into your slideshow. Besides being a cool feature, it is also very useful, because that way it is possible to add a nice video intro to your slideshow. Unfortunately, the developers of this software aren't considering this feature when they're developing newer versions of the software so, if you want to use this cool feature, you'll have to wait for an update. To get started, just download it and, once the software is installed, open the program and start working. To begin, you need to add files to the slideshow. Just drag and drop the pictures you want to add into the program's window or use the file browser to locate your media files. You can also select the output folder where you want to place the pictures. To add different pictures, just click the different buttons. You can choose a predefined slideshow type, choose the output folder, preview the pictures, and define various slideshow properties. Once you're finished, you can view the slideshow in a number of ways, using a slideshow (which is useful if you want to know how your slideshow looks like), in HTML (which is also very useful), as a picture disc or a slide show. The only disadvantage of the software is that you have to watch the introductory video if you want to use the slideshow function. It's a very short tutorial, so, if you're not interested in the particular function, don't watch it. Apart from that, Microsoft Slideshow Wizard is a pretty nice program. The interface is easy to use and the software is quite stable. Just keep in mind that

Simple features and uncomplicated functionality The user interface of the program consists of a wizard in which you can add individual images and folders containing the pictures by using the file browser or the "drag and drop" method. In the next step, you can input a slideshow and author name, select the output destination, as well as picture size (you can keep the current picture size or choose a predefined one). You can also select the slideshow type (simple or advanced, and optionally enable full screen mode) and set Microsoft Slideshow Wizard to resize only the pictures that are larger than the dimension you have selected. Once the wizard completes the task, you can view your newly created slideshow in an HTML image. Now you can use the code found in those files to upload images and share them with your friends. Stripped-down application for creating slideshows When you open the slideshow, you are first informed that it has been created with a Microsoft product, after which you can view images in a simplistic manner. If you have selected "advanced slideshow type" in the wizard, you can either view a simple image slideshow or a film strip, but you can also preview thumbnails. The program consumes a minuscule amount of system resources, especially by today's computers standards. However, we would have liked the application more if it would allowed its users to publish the slideshows directly online. There isn't even a user documentation to guide you in this direction so, mainly power users could handle this part of the process. Otherwise, Microsoft Slideshow Wizard is a simple software for putting together unpretentious slideshows in mere seconds, and with no more than a few mouse clicks. You can add as many photos as you want in the slideshow. In contrast, the image slideshow will load each image in the order you added them to the slideshow. Microsoft Slideshow Wizard downloads photos from the computer (specified in the slideshow) and puts the pictures in sequence, saving the slideshow as an HTML file. Multiple images can be used in the slideshow if you upload the pictures to Microsoft Image Web. The slideshow can be saved as a standard slideshow, and uploaded to web sites like Facebook or to online sharing communities. If you want to change the image order, you can move the images in the slideshow by selecting and dragging them. You can also create as many slideshows as you want with different titles and descriptions. By default, the pictures will be updated with a thumbnail. Resize the pictures for your slideshow Slideshows can have an unlimited number of images in them, but they won't be resized if you keep the image size as it is. You can create the slideshow with predefined dimensions (3 by 3, 4 by 4, 5 by 5, 6 by 6, 7 by 7 or 9 by 9) to automatically resize the pictures (thumbnail format). To keep the pictures the same size, you can drag and drop the images to resize them manually. If you want to keep the pictures the same size, you can set the images to be resized or scaled down, or even scaled up to larger images. Microsoft Slideshow Wizard offers two picture sizes to choose from (thumbnail and large). If the picture is smaller than the dimension you choose, it will be resized to fit this size and keep its original aspect ratio. If the picture is larger than the dimension you choose, it will be resized to fit this size. You can select your preferred sizes by using the "Full screen" option in Microsoft Slideshow Wizard.
