Long ago, we had to create huge amounts of log files and now we don't have time to always open them to see if we need them anymore. All the data in the logs is valuable, and as a result we want to manage them better. With this in mind, we have created a simple software tool that lets you manage your logs and delete those that have expired. Whenever a log file expires, the utility asks you to confirm your intentions, and if you choose to delete the log, it will do so accordingly. The program is very easy to use and intuitive, and you don't even have to watch how the logs are being removed since it is configured to do so automatically. While the settings of Log Delete are straightforward, we hope that the program is easy to use, and that all the main functions work the way we want them to.
