| **Part V: The Part of Tens** --- | --- In this part... I provide you with ten great resources for getting the best from Photoshop on the Internet. Also, there are three chapters of Photoshop tutorials that you may find helpful, and there are some tips sprinkled throughout the book that you can apply to your own editing. | Chapter 6 # Ten Web Sites with Photoshop Tutorials IN THIS CHAPTER **Discovering a wealth of tutorial sites** **Finding tutorials for major features** **Looking for tutorials for specific features** You've probably been to a site like YouTube and seen a video tutorial. Now you can search your favorite search engine for a site like that. In this chapter, I show you ten websites with a wealth of Photoshop tutorials. Check out the cool Photoshop tutorials from these sites. ## YouTube.com In addition to offering video tutorials, YouTube.com (`www.youtube.com`) has made YouTube a source for a number of Photoshop tutorials. You may be surprised to find that many of the tutorials are the work of professional artists. You can often get great tips from artists with millions of dollars of equipment. And these artists are sometimes willing to give the public a peek behind the curtain. These tutorials are called `_unlisted_` (check out the section "Working with Unlisted tutorials" later in this chapter for more information).

The tutorials that are available on YouTube.com are great, because most are offered for free. They may be free in the sense that they are free to view, but you usually need a free registration (and you need to subscribe to view unlisted tutorials). ## Adobe.com After Google, you may want to start at the pro-level Photoshop site: `www.Adobe.com` (but note the `www.Adobe` before the URL). This site offers a great array of information, and in addition to tutorials, it offers access to the latest versions of Photoshop, as well as peripherals and other software and hardware. To find a specific tutorial, go to the Photoshop Document Window (window appears in Figure 6-1) and open the Help menu. Choose Tutorials from the Help menu and select the topic you want. Photoshop offers an extensive set of tutorials, but not all these tutorials are available at the Adobe.com site. You have to search

The swine influenza virus H1N1 (SIV-H1N1), a subtype of the influenza A virus, was isolated from pigs in North America and Europe in April 2009. The World Health Organization (WHO) declared the SIV-H1N1 pandemic in June 2009 (see “Pandemic influenza A (H1N1) 2009: The sixth global influenza pandemic”, revised July 2009; available from: The virus has a typical influenza virus structure and its NS1 protein has several functions that are the same as those of the NS1 protein of the influenza virus. It has been reported that an SIV-H1N1 virus is attenuated when compared with a wild-type virus, suggesting that the NS1 protein of the SIV-H1N1 virus is advantageous for attenuation (see “Substitutions, deletions and inserts in the swine influenza virus NS1 protein”, Choi et al., Genes Immun. 2010 May; 11(5): 473-5). A pathogenic effect of the SIV-H1N1 virus on human beings is still controversial. However, according to an evaluation based on the severity of clinical symptoms of the infected persons, it is estimated that the swine influenza virus has an extremely high risk of causing a human pandemic (see “The current status of the pandemic swine influenza A (H1N1) 2009 virus”, US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention/Association of Public Health Laboratories/Food and Drug Administration, updated July 2009; available at The infected people who have symptoms of the SIV-H1N1 virus are strongly advised to take the treatment of aerosol inhalation using oseltamivir or inhalation of zanamivir. These drugs are neuraminidase inhibitors that bind to the active center of the neuraminidase protein of the virus. N-acetylneuraminic acid (sialic acid, sialic acid derivative) is widely present in the upper portion of a living body and is a

Induction of premature centriolar recruitment in S phase and Cdc2-dependent hyperphosphorylation of tyrosine 15 of centrosomal proteins. In this study we describe the characterization of a three step process that promotes the assembly of a novel non-dividing centriole structure, the centriolar precursor, or CPC. We used the prometaphase presence of a non-dividing centriolar precursor to establish conditions that allow the stabilization of this structure. The induction of such a structure required cyclin-dependent kinase (Cdk) activity, and a minimum of one to two divisions, with specific kinetics of each. Our results indicate that the early stages of CPC recruitment involve the phosphorylation of centriolar proteins, and are not mediated by the known mitotic cyclin-dependent kinase Cdk1. Furthermore, we show that cyclin E/Cdk2 activity is required for centriole assembly, independently of a role in maintaining centrosome activity. Upon Cdk2 inhibition, centrosomes undergo premature G1-S transition, due to the induction of a premature and sustained centriolar recruitment of the G1 kinase, Cdc2. The recruitment of the CPC is a Cdc2- and phosphoinositide-dependent process, mediated by the tyrosine phosphorylation of the centrosomal protein, Centrin 2. The phosphorylation of a tyrosine residue of Centrin 2 was specifically induced in the CPC during S-phase, as revealed by immunoprecipitation and immunoblot analysis. Moreover, we observed that a defective centriole structure, resulting from the mutation of the c-Src tyrosine kinase gene, reduced centrosome phosphorylation during S-phase, as detected by the induction of Cdc2 tyrosine 15 phosphorylation.

Altogether, our results demonstrate the existence of a S-phase-specific recruitment of the CPC, providing a trigger for the initiation of centriole assembly.[Application of LECO-GIA 100 rapid detection system to assess the presence of Helicobacter pylori in stool samples]. The LECO-GIA 100 rapid test system for the detection of H. pylori in stool samples (Gastro-test), which uses a solid-phase method of antigen immobilization, allows "in-vitro" detection of the pathogen in 15 minutes.
