Is driving the home market is a zero-sum competition against Google, which has a Quote unquote: "The specter of radically increasing competition in the smartphone business (a scenario that is not implausible given recent developments), could mean that 2012 will be the year of the conventional device makers" The idea of a smartphone, or other small handheld, superseding the laptop computer is widely read in press circles today [2]. One article notes that the market leader in the smartphone business, Apple, is not expected to directly lose much market share in 2012, thanks to a number of attractive improvements. Nevertheless, analysts appear to discount Apple's staying power in the smartphone business [3]. For example, the conclusion of one article: "The signs point to a 2012 takeover by [Google]." The evidence for this take-over is based not on market shares but on "revenues, market capitalization, smartphone penetration" and the close relationship between Google's revenues and revenues of the big PC makers. It is no secret that Google was one of the pioneers of the smartphones and as such, it is understandable why the industry is looking at it as a potential takeover (as well as the Internet operating system). Despite its large market share (more than 50% worldwide in 2010 [4]), Google is only one of several new players. However, it is not the only game in town. In this article, we will take a look at the Google competitors and what their strengths and weaknesses are. The competitors There are four main contenders: Microsoft's Windows Phone 8, Android, RIM's Blackberry 10 and Samsung's Galaxy Note. The new iPhone 5 will probably be available in mid-2012. The first three competitors are headed

Entitlement to service connection for a right shoulder disability, to include as secondary to service-connected disability.

2. Entitlement to service connection for a left knee disability, to include as secondary to service-connected disability. 3. Entitlement to service connection for a bilateral knee disability, to include as secondary to service-connected disability. REPRESENTATION Appellant represented by: Disabled American Veterans ATTORNEY FOR THE BOARD O.E.Fancher, Counsel

INTRODUCTION The Veteran served on active duty from August 1984 to September 1986 and from June 1987 to June 1992. These matters come before the Board of Veterans' Appeals (Board) on appeal from a February 2012 rating decision by the Regional Office (RO) of the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) in Phoenix, Arizona, which denied entitlement to service connection for a right shoulder disability, a left knee disability, and a bilateral knee disability. In March 2015, the Veteran's local VA office certified that he has received adequate notice of the issues on appeal but that he does not agree with the disposition of those issues. Accordingly, the RO has a duty to consider his appeal. 38 C.F.R 3e33713323
