How can I do that? A: You should use some kind of regular expression replacement. Preferably.+ matching any arbitrary character sequence with a range of time. A couple of examples from GitHub: You could use something like (in Ruby): `(.+)$1`
`Regexp.last_match(0).captures captures[1] # => "Fast Fox Switch version 3.0"` or (in Perl): `(?m)^(?=.*(.Fast Fox Switch).$ $1 # => "Fast Fox Switch version 3.0"` (That's assuming you want the first match, otherwise use `.?` instead of `.`.) Note: If you have some kind of files with a specific fixed file name, you could also search for it specifically. `/*`
