Q: Android webview force network call Hey everybody, is it possible to force a page to call its server if it doesn't support some newer version of javascript and you can't change the source code of the website? Actually I have a webview in my app, which has to call a website that only has a compatibility mode, but the browser shows the old version of the website, which is not the one I want to use. I'm not allowed to change the source code so I don't have the possibility to add something like to the page. A: I believe you can force a webview to refresh the page and that should cause the server to send updated content. `webView.loadUrl(webView.getUrl());` See `loadUrl()` and `reload()` on the `WebView` class in the documentation.
