An illustration of the travertine used for the backplash of the Museum of Fine Arts' rotunda. The texture is very reflective. As the first light of spring shines upon the heart of Madison, a new installation of art and craftsmanship has emerged from the Midwest. The hard work that went into producing the Museum of Art's new 25,000 sq. ft. rotunda, were the results of a collaboration by many of our local schools and community groups. Innovative and beautiful, the "shimmering rotunda" is based on a resounding and exciting theme of the "archaeological future," utilizing the challenge of
