battle the new school way of life! Wouldn't it be great to make a tattoo that represents your passion without having to go to the high school of pain? There is definitely a new way to fulfill the generation's thirst for tattoos, one that is child-friendly and low on cost. The digital age has not only opened up the doors of the tattoo industry, but it has also created new ways to earn money from very little effort. It is true that for years tattoos have been a taboo subject in most of the western societies, but the recent events are changing the face of tattoos forever. Now, the new generation are on the rise and they have no intention of keeping the past ways of thinking. The birth of the digital generation has given birth to tattoo communities. There are a number of websites that are dedicated to tattoo people, and all of them are interactive. Once people find a website that they like, they are welcomed to sign up for forums, message boards and even blogs. In these websites, people can talk about their tattoos, ask about other people's tattoos and can even share their own in graphic form. The inspiration for creative people may come from strangers and people in close proximity. Today, many tattoos are digitally designed and completed in a matter of minutes. Tattoo artists are professional in these designs and are computer savvy. Tattoos used to take a long time to design and complete. The artists had to get ink ready before they could ink and wait for the paint to dry before they could begin to design the next layer. The new age of the tattoo has been shaped by the technology; the tattooist is no longer the artist. Tattoo artists can be manufacturers, printers, web designers, graphic designers and a lot more. People with any kind of talent are opening up the door to their talents and using them to benefit the tattoo community. In the past, tattoo artists were categorized as the craftsman of the tattoo world. They have always Redundancy and oversampling can be used to reduce the bit error rate.

In general, the two types of FEC follow the principle of redundancy with the primary code symbol being of fixed length, while the secondary code symbols can be of arbitrary length. Both types of codes can also make use of a side bit to record error locations and flag the data as erroneous. Like distance encoding, the aim of FEC coding is to limit the probability of the signal being received erroneously in spite of a noisy or distant channel. In this type of coding scheme, the performance of the FEC is seen to be a function of the difference between the maximum and minimum distances between the equivalent code points of the primary and secondary codes.
