Features Key:

- The New Generation engine has been upgraded with a brand-new physics, player, ball, player ball and ball Physics variations coupled with advanced rendering technologies to deliver more realistic scenes and goal action. Vast improvements have been implemented to Player Attribute and Skill systems which now reflect player skill level at the right time to give you more control over your game.
- Full Body Tracking - The new Reaction Engine makes full body tracking possible on any body type even on tricky and slim players. This means, literally, the player reacts to your movements on the pitch and you have more control and more possible solutions during gameplay
- Player Defending - This engine enables developers to define how a player is defending an attack. Players can be assigned to multiple defensive categories ranging from "Defending Offensives" to "Defending Midfielders" that will guide the player's defensive positioning on the pitch. For example, this engine will reduce the chances for the opponent from scoring with a header when a midfielder is defending the goal.
- Player Offsides - The Offside Engine enables every major team to define a threshold where a player is considered as being offside - this is a major change from FIFA 11. The Offside Engine has been completely revamped to incorporate the latest scientific information and will be highly effective in reproducing the correct offside decision for every fan and club of the real game. For example, setting the threshold in a FIFA 22 Offside Engine to 0.5 allows the team to see players running in behind the last defender but still in the opponent's half which is a position from where a player is usually offside.
- New Team Play - Two primary attributes are used to align the team play to the real challenge: The selected formation and the selected formation order.
- Improved In-Stadium Experience - A match connected stadium simulation has been improved that allows for the perfect detailed control of camera angles enabling you to zoom out whenever you want - for example, when you scan the crowd.
- New Alliance Creation System - Alliances are the heart of FIFA as it facilitates competition in FIFA games from a supporting team perspective and allowing club owners to create alliances using their own managerial ambitions and philosophies. The new Untergrund system now also supports the creation of alliances.
- International Women's World Cup
