to command an overall majority. The Conservative Party and Labour both won 323 seats in the 650-seat House of Commons — a result the BBC's latest projections show is roughly the same as the numbers of the two parties in the last Parliament. Here's everything you need to know about the results. What are the names of the two biggest parties in the country? Conservative Party The Conservative Party is the official name of the national party of Britain's governing party. Many of the party's current MPs are members of the Scottish, Welsh, Northern Irish and English Conservative parties. The party's current leader is Prime Minister Boris Johnson. Labour Party Labour is the official name of the Labour Party, the largest in British politics, which has its roots in the Labour movement founded in 1906. The party is currently led by Jeremy Corbyn and its current leader in the House of Commons is Angela Rayner. Both parties were propped up by the Liberal Democrats. The party's leader, Tim Farron, announced his intention to stand down on Tuesday morning. What is a hung parliament? A hung parliament is the result of elections in which no party or coalition is able to secure an overall majority of MPs in the House of Commons. In this election, neither Labour nor the Conservatives have won enough seats for a majority of MPs from either of those parties in the Commons. This means that MPs from both parties will be needed to support legislation and every government move, and that any decisions will be made by a minority Conservative-Lib Dem government and a
