Learn more about the features of Photoshop. Check out our other Photoshop tutorials to see how to work with different tools and features. 1. Use Photoshop as an Image Editor Using Photoshop as an image editor is a must for the novice. Photoshop has a wide range of tools available to you to work with your images. These tools all work together in unison to enable you to perform all manner of effects, manipulations, and edits to the canvas (in most versions of Photoshop). The canvas is the output destination for the image you are editing. For example, if you are editing a portrait, the canvas will be the portrait itself. 2. Create a Background Layer The canvas background layer is typically the largest layer in the image. Most Photoshop users leave this layer blank. This allows you to more easily create other layers within the image and resize or edit them later. Important: Photoshop will not let you resize a blank layer. You must first create a layer with some sort of background. You can use the default background of the image (such as a solid color), or you can use a special one-click selection for a pattern. To do this, simply select Layer > New > Layer. Click OK. 3. Add a Layer Mask A layer mask is an editable mask that can only be viewed in the Layers palette. The mask allows you to erase parts of your canvas for some special effects. To create one, simply click on the canvas to reveal the mask settings in the options bar. 4. Adjust the Canvas Size You can easily resize your canvas to any size with this method. Choose Edit > Canvas Size. The canvas size dialog will appear. Choose any desired canvas size, and click OK. 5. Add a New Layer Almost every use of Photoshop involves adding new layers. A new layer is simply a layer in the canvas. You can do this with the New Layer icon in the top-left area of the dialog box. Click once on the canvas and then press the "New Layer" button. You will see a new, blank layer in your Layers palette. 6. Duplicate a Layer If you want to duplicate a layer, simply double-click on the layer to make it active, and press the D key to duplicate it. 7. Color Range or Lightroom You can use the

Karl Ludwig Müller Karl Ludwig Müller (9 April 1861 – 13 February 1933) was a Danish entomologist. His best known work was the three volumes of Beitrage zur Kenntniss der Schmetterlinge von Schleswig-Holstein, published by Fritz Vogeler (Schleswig-Holsteinischer entomologischer Verein; now Institut für Fl. Schleswig-Holstein). Life Müller was born in Christiansfeld in Southern Schleswig, the son of a priest. He was educated at, Christiania. He was a pupil of the Danish author Gerrit Blom. He began writing articles on entomology for the Danmarksforsker, for which he also delivered lectures on his collection. Müller became an assistant of the entomologist Fritz Vogeler from 1887 to 1889 and in 1890 was appointed to the same position at the University of Copenhagen. In 1892 he was appointed to full professor, a position he held until 1933. He retired as a professor in 1908. In 1908, Müller was involved in organizing a two-year expedition to the Western hemisphere. The expedition was organized in collaboration with the Hamburg Museum, the Berlin Museum and the Cambridge University Museum. The joint expedition took place in the summers of 1908 and 1909. Müller was joined on the expedition by the Professor of Microbiology at the University of Munich, Adolf Winkelman. Besides organizing the trip, Müller undertook research for the expedition, translating the microfauna collected into Danish for Winkelman. In 1909 Müller visited Costa Rica, Mexico and Nicaragua. In 1913 Müller went on a second visit to Costa Rica with Winkelman. Works Die Schmetterlinge Norddeutschlands (1907). Die Schmetterlinge Schleswig-Holsteins (1908-1909). Bemerkungen zur Kenntniss der Schmetterlinge Nord-Westdeutschlands (1909). Die Schmetterlinge der Gattungen Trichosia, Orthemis, Ammophila und Pseudorthocheips (1913). It's pretty safe to say that most people who haven't spent their entire life living here are pretty baffled by the accent that Kiwis use. It's a combination of things, really. You have to decide for yourself what you can forgive (the) and what you cannot. The accent often sounds like one continuous sound, but it's actually made up of four different sounds. The first three are the tonal sounds of the English language, which are the same as any other English speakers have. The fourth is the fricative component, which creates the clicks and the slaps of the kiwi. It's not a one-way conversation. Sure, the kiwis might use the standard English patterns of "I" and "me", but we all do that. What's more, we might also have a high-pitched "mmm" sound, a flat, tonal "uh" sound, or even a "mmmm" sound. Which of these are present in our speech depends on what we're saying. Our speech is actually pretty difficult to learn, for a few reasons. First, our range of frequencies is different from most other languages. (British English uses two tones, while most other languages have four, six, or eight.) That means it's very difficult to learn a new language with a different set of frequencies. Second, we usually use many different sounds, and not just the standard English ones. Imagine a language that has a series of clicks, a series of slaps, and a series of "m" sounds. Now imagine that you're teaching it to a non-Kiwi speaker. In a lot of cases, it would be pretty obvious to a non-Kiwi speaker what sounds to be like a click, a slap, or an "m" (the "m" is a bit more like a "P" though). It's not a perfect example, since there are actual words with the same sounds and meanings, but in many cases it's pretty easy to tell a "k" sound from a "p" sound. (BTW, if you're more interested in learning the exact set of sounds that kiwis use, check out this article)
