Typical Photoshop workflow Photoshop: Photo editing and manipulation software and the dominant choice of professional photographers. Image editing: Editing and manipulation of digital images. Photo editing: Editing and manipulation of printed photographs. Software cost: Affordable pricing, but most of the desktop users is quite a significant investment. © Photo by Anthony Acheson PS 101 tutorial Welcome to the 101 tutorial of Photoshop. Here's a basic 101 training for you to start your Photoshop adventure. If you can understand this tutorial you'll be able to get a lot of basic things done with Photoshop. If you are really stuck, you can always ask for help on the forums but it may take a bit of time. There is a powerful learning curve in

Photoshop and most users take three to six months to learn its intricacies. In addition, users have to have a fairly mature hardware setup (and the memory is usually not enough for long work sessions). Most users use Photoshop at home (desktop) but there are many who find it too frustrating for their work in the office. What's new in Photoshop CS6 The new Photoshop CS6 has a host of new features. Among the most important ones are the new Content-Aware Move tool that copies layer content to preserve an image's content, the new photo filter effects, the new Content-Aware Fill, the new Content-Aware Remove tool, the new HDR lighting effects, Lightroom integration, an online learning site (photoshopcb), more brushes and paint tools, faster start-up, and a web camera viewer. The basic modes have changed in a way that most users will find comfortable. The new modes include: 3D - In 3D, you have access to many new features, including 3D Objects, Image Data, Lens Correction, Lens Correction Pro, and Lens Correction Wrap. HDR - The new HDR mode makes some significant changes in a major way. One of its most important improvements is to paint directly onto images. RAW - RAW allows you to create and edit RAW images natively with Pro Photo RAW. RAW - Adobe Camera RAW allows RAW images to be opened as layers. Your changes are retained when you save to your original file. Today's art In today's tutorial, we'll use Photoshop to make a picture of the Canoe Lake. In the first step we'll duplicate the RULE stamp and add some transformation

An Eraser tool can either delete an area of an image (making an image transparent), or remove pixels from a certain area of the image (making the pixels black). The Magic Wand tool is used for selecting an area of an image. It can be used as a catch-all selection tool to select an area that meets specific criteria, or to select pixels that are of a certain color. The Lasso tool lets you draw an area on an image that can then be removed or added. The Pen tool can be used to draw paths on an image, which can then be modified, duplicated, deleted, or copied. The Paint Bucket tool can be used to either fill a selection with a color or remove pixels from the selection. The Gradient Tool lets you create a gradient to fill an area of an image. The Smudge Tool lets you quickly apply a texture or shape to an area of an image. The Healing Brush tool was designed to make minor repairs to an image such as removing blemishes, correcting color casts, and deleting dust marks. The Blur and Sharpen tools are used to adjust the contrast of an image. The Puppet tool lets you move an area of an image around and change its size. It also lets you adjust the shape of an image or distort its pixels. The Clone Stamp is an extremely helpful tool that can be used for a variety of purposes. The Clone Stamp tool allows you to copy pixels from one area of an image and paste them into another area. This is useful for repairing damaged or corrupt images. What I learned at DrupalCamp Toronto (photo post) I have been a long-time subscriber to the Flickr group flickr.com/groups/drupalcamptoronto, and finally attended my first DrupalCamp Toronto. I have always been a bit fascinated by the smoothness of the event, and the size of the DrupalCamp group in Toronto. There are already (as of this writing) 784 members with over 2,000 photos (with several hundred more photos at flickr.com). It's great to see so many new faces at the event, and it was also really nice to catch up with the several friends I had met at previous events (mostly at the Mad Hatters and Noodletown Club). It was also great to meet up with a few of the people I have been swapping emails with for several months. As I expected, it was an interesting and fun couple of days. I tried to make a small break from the next day of the four day event, and go to the Toronto Science Centre so I could learn about the biology of Dinoflagellates. I will have a separate posting on that. It was also great to watch some of the presentations at the end of the day before dinner. My only regret is that I was not able to meet more people in person. It's always more fun to show someone your stuff, but it was especially difficult in the after-hours of the last day when so many people were leaving. I hope that I will get a chance to meet more people at future DrupalCamps. In the end, I had a great time, and learned a lot. Here is a summary of my notes on the presentations and workshops I attended: Programme Programme - In terms of structure, the programme had two tracks: the 'Technical track' which was more focused on the Drupal content management system, and the 'Business track' which was more focused on business topics. The Business track included presentations by: Sandra J. Fraser (Grant Media), Frank Armstrong (Gamma Environmental), Bob Collingbourne (Kelp Software), Scott McCloy (Convoy) and Mattias Pettersson (Canvas). The Technical track included presentations by: Keith Ayoob (Vicomedia), Keith Attle (Graphics)
