We isolated a cDNA encoding a transporter of thyroid hormone (T(3)), MCT8, from chicken skeletal muscle. The MCT8 protein revealed the characteristic transmembrane topology of a facilitative proton-driven transporter, including five transmembrane domains with an extracellular loop and a cytoplasmic loop of about 50 amino acids. In adult chicken, MCT8 mRNA was abundant in skeletal muscle, heart, brain, small intestine, and kidney, and mRNA for the Na(+)-H(+) exchanger (NHE-1) and the thiazide-sensitive Na(+)-Cl(-) cotransporter (NCC) were also detected in some tissues. In embryos, MCT8 mRNA was detected in the skeletal muscles of the myotomes, heart, liver, and kidney but was highly expressed in the brain, and it was maintained at high levels in myotomes and brain in adult chickens. We also examined the expression pattern of MCT8 in mouse using a probe for a highly conserved region of chicken MCT
