"The massive amount of data we collect goes beyond just running," said Liverpool FC midfielder and motion capture technician Kolo Toure. "The data that we collect helps us analyse and improve our gameplay, pitch and training sessions." "We're delighted to be the first football game to embrace such technology and have the opportunity to work closely with so many successful players," said Maxis senior vice president for creative development Lisa Dray. "It's clear from our tech and gameplay demos that the new game mode is at the heart of an incredible experience, and we're looking forward to finding out just what it can do." FIFA 22 is set for release September 27 in North America, on October 2 in Europe, and October 6 in Japan. Try to imagine three things. The first is the word alchemy. The second thing is a fully functional sieve device that removes all that awful fine gold dust from all that ore in order for it to be sold. Now, if you can imagine those three things, you can imagine this: 1. It's a handheld sieve. You can carry it around and use it a lot. 2. It's the smallest sieve ever made. 3. You don't have to wear a variety of strange metal coins on your head. It's the new gold recovery sieve. It's made by the guys who invent sieves. The sieve has 8 little holes in a square that allows the fine gold dust to fall through, which will be stored in the net bag at the top. The sieve is called the Graphite Warmer Sieve, and for some reason, it's been built with graphite on the inside. If you look closely, that's what it's made of. So here's the thing. Graphite in powdered form is the most energy-efficient thing to put in a furnace. The reason is simple: it increases the effective surface area for fuel to be exposed to. For every gram of coal or firewood you burn, you release 2.2 grams of carbon dioxide. For each gram of graphite, it releases 14.5 grams of carbon dioxide. This is why it's pointless to buy "clean coal" and then spend

Are you still playing Ultimate Team? Ever wonder how to play to your full potential? Do you want to find out how to get into the Full Strength 3D Penalty Box? Do you enjoy winning and feel more fulfilled when winning is hard-earned? Do you find yourself debating tactics and formations on a new player or new mode every week? Do you have a favorite player or club you love to see but don't know how to actually play them better? More than anything, you simply want to play the game the way you want to play the game. FIFA is Football. Full-strength Attacking Deleting players, changing tactics, and gaining an advantage over time are still critical elements of any successful game of football. We're addressing these elements head-on this year by focusing on ball control and attacking. Our goal was to make it feel natural and fluid. In the near future, we will release the Control and Maneuvering Coaching Qualities to the public, making this year's game more accessible than ever before. These elements are already available in the new Game Intelligence framework and you can play with them now, to see if you like the way we're approaching full-strength attacking. Make the Difference You decide what happens in the final moments of the match. This is the last era of control that FIFA allows to the player, putting the ball in motion with your chest. No one-touching, no drifts, everything is simulated. The offensive team must score in the last 5 seconds to win! The defensive team has just a few seconds to prevent the attacking team from scoring. This is football! Play to Your Potential Concede the ball on your defensive half. Delegation is an important part of the game. Watch a match from your favourite team and you'll see that every player constantly runs forward and backward, making a difference between being successful and not. In this year's game, you will need to make decisions for your team in the final few seconds of a match. This will never change. The team with the most men on the field will always have an advantage. More Money, More Control No more strategic decisions that you have to make in real-time during gameplay. We have addressed this by
