Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a vehicle control apparatus performs an air-fuel ratio correction control using an exhaust gas air-fuel ratio detection means in which a change in concentration of a specific component in an exhaust gas is detected. In this control, it is known that a fuel supply is controllably performed to change a relative air-fuel ratio between the air and the fuel. (Hereinafter, this is referred to as a "fuel ratio".) In the air-fuel ratio correction control, when it is determined that the air-fuel ratio correction is required, a correction amount for changing the air-fuel ratio is calculated so as to correct a deviation of the air-fuel ratio from a target air-fuel ratio. For example, a vehicular control apparatus according to Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2005-192737 calculates a correction amount for changing the fuel ratio in the exhaust gas based on the air-fuel ratio correction amount calculated as described above and a concentration sensor detection amount of the specific component
