We report a case of plasmablastic lymphoma which presented as a tonsillar enlargement and the literature is reviewed. Our patient, a 35-year-old man, had presented with a 1-month history of an enlarged tongue. Physical examination revealed bilateral tonsillar enlargement. Histopathology of the tonsillar biopsy showed diffuse infiltration of atypical cells with abundant cytoplasm and large vesicular nuclei. The diagnosis of plasmablastic lymphoma was made. Chemotherapy was performed and achieved complete remission. However, a paraaortic lymph node mass was found 17 months later. The diagnosis of plasmablastic lymphoma was reconfirmed by immunostaining. The literature is reviewed and the clinicopathological characteristics of plasmablastic lymphoma are discussed.
