"We are incredibly excited that FIFA 22 has the ability to harness the power of motion capture data," said David Rutter, Executive Producer of FIFA. "This technology really gives the players an entirely new opportunity to be in every situation." "This revolutionary addition to the game will bring the player's movements and reactions to a completely new level, presenting challenges and enhancements to the player experience that will make the game even more realistic," said Daniel Radzikowski, Executive Producer. One of the more significant changes to the game is the introduction of "Double Take Controls," which allows players to perform close-range agility moves while standing still. Additionally, key improvements to the player's foot movement and turning prowess will provide an enhanced sense of control in tight spaces. Dynamic light responses to the player's movement will also provide a more responsive and reactive game experience. FIFA 20 introduced new and enhanced camera angles, player models, animations and ball physics, as well as a brand new brand of football - Total Football. For FIFA 22, FIFA has brought in a host of new and enhanced features, including "Double Take Controls," a brand-new dynamic lighting system, new animation tools, a host of new awards and more. "As a designer, what I'm most looking forward to is the ability to create even more player behaviours," said Olivier Zarrouati, Producer of FIFA 22. "Motion capture allows us to capture a player's body movement that goes beyond the limited animations of before." "The next-gen capture technology allows us to simulate a player's full range of actions, and the result is a player who is able to move around the pitch and perform the most demanding shots," he added. One of the most prominent player models in FIFA 22 is Christopher "Guus" Hiddink, the highly-respected Dutch football manager. "Guus" is a contemporary player model to the team players in FIFA 20, with new, believable animations and high level of detail including new jersey designs for different positions. His unique voice and range of possible conversations was achieved using face capture technology. "We're excited to have the chance to share the fun of being a manager," said Hiddink. "With the capture of so many players, the global player pool will be far richer than ever." Combined with the smooth

The FIFA development team continues to work with clubs around the world to provide the most authentic, comprehensive and player-driven sports simulation experience. FIFA on mobile and tablet is an epic touch-based experience, designed from the ground up for the endless hours spent on your smartphone or tablet. FIFA's complete coverage of the 2018 FIFA World Cup continues with the FIFA World Cup Mobile™ app, which takes fans to the four groups, the knockout stages, the final and offers 24 official live matches of football's most prestigious international tournament. How is this different from FIFA 21? For the first time, FIFA is pushing boundaries and challenging perceptions. Just as we take scientific data to make the competition more authentic, what we created in FIFA 21 is not enough. We expect this year's game to represent the best football ever and to stand the test of time, alongside the game that came before it. We wanted to push the boundaries of the football experience and explore all the possibilities of football with this game. We feel this passion project is only going to be enhanced by this last major iteration of the code, and we now expect the game to be even better than FIFA 21.
