Understanding the GIMP interface When you open GIMP, you see a small screen with a toolbar along the top and a small image window showing a live preview of your image and a large workspace with a grid at the bottom, as shown in Figure 4-5. The top toolbar has many icons (not just the ones shown in Figure 4-5), as explained in the next section. If you want to save a file, you need to go to the File menu, choose Save As, and choose the format you want to save it in (.psd). You can also use the Ctrl+S keyboard shortcut. FIGURE 4-5: GIMP offers two displays: a preview area (top) and a workspace (bottom). # MIGHTY PEEKING AROUND THE INTERNET Don't be fooled by the name "GIMP." This tool is much more powerful than the old Paint program. To see some of its capabilities, check out GIMPWorld.com for an in-depth introduction to GIMP, as well as a good comparison chart between GIMP and Photoshop. The GIMP toolbar offers the following buttons: * File: You can save your image or open an existing file. You use the File menu to save a file in a variety of common image formats, including JPEG and TIFF. You open files by selecting them and pressing Ctrl+O. * Edit: You can perform basic tasks, such as crop or resize an image, or you can adjust levels, curves, and other tools from the toolbox. You can use these tools in conjunction with the Image ⇒ Adjustment tools discussed in a later section. * View: You can use the View menu to switch between the different GIMP views (Image, Canvas, and Layer). These are discussed in the next section.

Mediterranean diet and risk of Parkinson's disease: the case of the most frequent pathogenic mutations. Mutations in GBA, PARK2 and SNCA genes cause an autosomal recessive form of Parkinson's disease (PD), the most frequent neurodegenerative disease. Recent data suggest that a Mediterranean diet may be beneficial to health and in particular to PD patients. We studied the association between Mediterranean diet and PD risk in Spanish GBA and PARK2 mutated patients and in SNCA gene carriers. Spanish PD patients (n = 179) were recruited by 56 Spanish movement disorder centres, and healthy controls (n = 173) were included in the study. Individuals carrying mutations in GBA, PARK2 or SNCA were selected from the Spanish PD cohort (n = 527). The Mediterranean diet was assessed by validated questionnaires. GBA patients and SNCA carriers had a lower adherence to the Mediterranean diet than controls; no difference was observed between PARK2 carriers and non-carriers. No interaction between food group intake and genotype was found in GBA patients and SNCA carriers. However, in PARK2 gene mutation carriers, a significant interaction between the adherence to the Mediterranean diet and the risk of developing PD was found. The odds ratio for PD in non-carriers was 5.03 (95% confidence interval: 1.13-23.01) for lower than 8 points vs. higher than 8 points, after adjustment for sex and age (p = 0.03). The results suggest that adherence to the Mediterranean diet may modify the PD risk in PARK2 gene mutation carriers.

Validation of lumbosacral radiographs to predict urinary retention in patients with acute spinal cord injury. Previous studies have proposed the use of predictors to help identify patients at risk for developing urinary retention (UR) after acute spinal cord injury (SCI). However, few studies have prospectively validated these predictors. The purpose of this study was to prospectively validate these factors as predictors of UR in an acute SCI population. This study involved the prospective collection of outcome data using a standard protocol for patients admitted to the rehabilitation unit. Analysis included validated measures of impairment (Medical Outcome Study Short Form 36 and Neuromuscular Triage Score), self-reported characteristics (SF-12), and radiographic data (Functional Independence Measure and Nurometer). Twenty-nine UR events occurred in 15 patients (18-76 yrs; mode, 43.3 yrs). An initial study

We used to spend $150-190 on our monthly electric bills just a couple of years ago and we were forced to find a way to pay less and more importantly, to avoid buying power from the power company during peak usage times. We were ready for a change, and with West Coast Power, it happened overnight! Our monthly electric bills are now less than $80- a savings of over $100, not to mention what the saving on our power bill has done for our monthly profit margins. I have recommended to other business owners, and they have all commented the same. West Coast Power has made a difference in our business and we will definitely be staying with them for a long time to come! West Coast Power has made a tremendous difference in my business, and I have recommended them to others. Our monthly savings is much higher than with my prior provider! -- John J. DeFranzo West Coast Power has helped us lower our electric cost by 85% which
