Example embodiments of the inventive concepts described herein relate to a memory system including a memory controller and a plurality of memory chips which may obtain improved access time. Memory devices are classified into volatile memory devices and nonvolatile memory devices. The volatile memory devices, such as DRAMs (Dynamic Random Access Memories), may lose their data when a power supply is interrupted. The nonvolatile memory devices, such as MRAMs (Magnetic Random Access Memories), may store data even when a power supply is interrupted. MRAMs are memory devices which may include memory cells storing data using a magnetoresistive characteristic. MRAMs may include magnetic tunnel junctions which may use the magnetoresistive characteristic of the magnetic tunnel junction. A magnetic tunnel junction may have a resistance, which may be determined by a relative magnetic direction of ferromagnetic layers. When the relative magnetic direction of the ferromagnetic layers is parallel, the resistance may be relatively low, and when the relative magnetic direction of the ferromagnetic layers is anti-parallel, the resistance may be relatively high. In this way, a direction of magnetization (magnetization state) of a magnetoresistive material, for example, a free ferromagnetic layer or a fixed ferromagnetic layer, may be changed to an orientation corresponding to a logic value "0" or "1". Here, the orientation of magnetization of the magnetoresistive material may be changed by applying a magnetic field to the magnetoresistive material.Identification of a feline leukemia virus-like element in the genomes of transmissible retroviruses.
