A phase I trial of the antiestrogen tamoxifen in combination with splenectomy in advanced ovarian cancer. A Gynecologic Oncology Group Study. Tamoxifen, an antiestrogen, was given to patients with advanced ovarian cancer after cytoreductive surgery. There were two objectives. First, to determine the maximum tolerated dose (MTD) of tamoxifen when given concurrently with cytoreduction, followed by surgical removal of the spleen, and then maintenance tamoxifen. The second objective was to determine the safety and efficacy of this combination. This was a phase I clinical trial in which tamoxifen was given in 3-week cycles with surgery and then tamoxifen was maintained as long as there was no evidence of progressive disease. Seventeen patients were treated at four dose levels. There were no dose-limiting toxicities, two patients received only the 2.5-mg dose, and the others received the 5-mg dose. Fourteen patients (82%) had either a decrease in size of the residual tumor or a complete disappearance of microscopic residual disease. At the completion of a tamoxifen treatment period, 10 of 12 patients (83%) had a total resection. A dose of 5 mg tamoxifen followed by surgical removal of the spleen and then maintenance tamoxifen is tolerated well by most patients. This regimen appears to be clinically active in patients with advanced ovarian cancer following surgical cytoreduction.Witnesses have described how the gunman in the Sutherland Springs church massacre ran into the building and opened fire, shooting people where they were sitting or kneeling, in one of the deadliest attacks in recent US history. As a 26-year-old Texan man in his early to mid-30s opened fire in a small rural church, people inside had a difficult time understanding what was happening.
