As the number of players on the pitch increases and the pressure and intensity ramps up, the performance of the pitch will degrade. "With FIFA 22, when more and more players are on the pitch, the artificial intelligence will become much more reactive than it is in FIFA 21," explained Mercier. Furthermore, all of the natural intelligence processing takes place on the Xbox One. "Xbox Smartglass allows you to immediately access the most relevant and engaging information from the video experience you are watching to instantly support any in-game decision-making process," explained the game's producer, Domenic Fratarcangeli. The importance of bringing the game to life through its own motion-capture technology was explained by Fratarcangeli: "If we didn't have the opportunity to capture the emotion of these unique in-game moments, this technology would be an expensive, non-sustainable system." When asked if he felt that the use of a motion capture team could have been better applied in the new iPro soccer game, Fratarcangeli felt that the team produced a great product and that there was some clarity on the over-under expectation for a motion capture game, which is what made it successful. "In the future, if we have the opportunity to work on a game like FIFA 16 or a game that has an in-depth, real-life motion capture experience, like the Unreal Engine, I'd definitely want to try," said Fratarcangeli.
