Editing Layers and Adjustments One of the great advantages of using Elements instead of Photoshop is the ability to edit an image in layers. With layers, you can preview an image before you do the editing. To create a layer, follow these steps: 1. Select either the Rectangular Selection or Free Transform tool. 2. Choose Edit => Layer and click the New Layer button. You see a dialog box offering you lots of options that enable you to name and adjust the layer. 3. Click OK. Photoshop gives you a Q: What data types do Google BigQuery have? I have a Google Big Query Job and I have Google Cloud Platform account and I thought that is the best way to upload data using Cloud SQL(using Cloud Console) and now I discovered that BigQuery can upload data too? I checked the API and found the following: Any type of data (BLOB, TEXT, INT64, STRING, BINARY, JSON and PHOTOS) So I am wondering what "BLOB, TEXT, INT64, STRING, BINARY, JSON and PHOTOS" refer to? Please check the table below if you have time (I have created it from a Google Cloud Console): CREATE TABLE [test1] (userID TEXT, data_FINAL TEXT, date TIMESTAMP) A: CREATE TABLE [test1] (userID TEXT, data_FINAL TEXT, date TIMESTAMP) data_FINAL is of type TEXT: Today, I released version 1.4.0 of Google Closure Compiler. It includes many bug fixes and enhancements, as well as the addition of a command-line interface (CLI) for compiling JavaScript. An earlier CLIsample (static), and code samples for both CLI and regular, are available on CodePen. I'm hoping this update will attract even more users to Closure Compiler, and I'm also hoping that some of you will help me make the tool even better. I've created a new Contributing Guide with specific guidelines, but here are some more general items I'd like feedback on: Is the documentation good, or should it be better? Are the samples easy to understand and easy to modify? Are there any parts of the user guide that you'd like me to add more sample code for, or that you'd like to remove?
