I was reading the documentation on PreparedStatement The database driver will convert the SQL string to the corresponding SQL expression when it creates the PreparedStatement. I am not sure what this statement exactly implies. Could someone help me in understanding this concept. A: You can read the official Oracle docs on PreparedStatement (or link to them) for more information. Simply, using PreparedStatement you can avoid SQL Injection attacks, as the database driver will take care of parsing the query before it runs. Q: Select Default Value when Not Specified I have a field in my select statement that looks like this SELECT * FROM table1 WHERE Table1ID = @ID I am using a parameterized query with a company name that could be null or "Company ABC". What I want is to select "Company ABC" when the parameter value is null. What I thought was to use a COALESCE function to test if the parameter value is null, like this SELECT * 595f342e71
