Aminoglycoside penetration into the human and rat central nervous system: effect of pathophysiological conditions. We studied the penetration of gentamicin and tobramycin into the central nervous system (CNS) of rats and humans. At normal conditions, tissue-to-plasma drug concentration ratios for gentamicin and tobramycin were 1.46 ± 0.18 (mean \pm SD; n = 15) and 0.73 ± 0.26 (n = 15), respectively. (Normal mean \pm SD tissue-to-plasma drug concentration ratios for gentamicin and tobramycin are 1.6 ± 0.3 and 0.92 ± 0.21 , respectively.) These values increased to 3.46 ± 1.32 (n = 3) and 2.00 ± 0.53 (n = 4) for gentamicin and tobramycin, respectively, during severe hyperglycemia. At low pH, the tissue-to-plasma concentration ratio for both aminoglycosides also increased to 3.29 ± 1.42 (n = 3) and 1.82 ± 0.49 (n = 4) for gentamicin and tobramycin, respectively. At normal pH, pharmacokinetic studies in humans found tissue-to-plasma concentration ratios of 1.59 ± 0.36 (n = 12) and 0.76 ± 0.35 (n = 12) for gentamicin and tobramycin, respectively, but in some patients these concentrations increased to 6.07 ± 3.33 (n = 4) and 5.70 ± 2.76 (n = 4) during hyperglycemia. These data demonstrate that the in situ tissue-to-plasma concentration ratio for aminoglycoside antibiotics may be substantially greater than predicted from in vitro measurements of free aminoglycoside concentrations.
