* Adobe Photoshop There are a multitude of reasons why someone might want to use Photoshop, or even for _why_ someone would use it to manipulate images. But right now, we are going to talk about one of the biggest reasons – making digital images fit together. There are many places where you can get images and manipulate them, and you may use a combination of software programs that have different features to work together. This is good, as there is a lot of software out there now that, while it may not be the most popular, is probably the most powerful. So, we are going to focus on the Photoshop.com website as the main place to get Photoshop tutorials. Once you have downloaded Photoshop, you will be able to access all of the different tutorials listed at the bottom of the page, and your work will automatically save to your computer once you are done. Photoshop Basics Most of the tutorials will go through the process of creating a simple image and a group of layered items that work together. In a _simple_ image, we're going to start out with a clean, white background. To create layers in Photoshop, open an image, and then create a new canvas. Next, we're going to load a stock photo that you want to use as the background for this image. If you feel you would like to start the process over, you can always create a new document. Once you are in Photoshop, there should be a tab on the left-hand side that says "Layers." Click the tab, and you'll see a place to add your various layer types, as seen in Figure 4-8. After you have the basic open, you want to create a new, white, background layer and name it _Background_ for this tutorial. You can always create your own name and style later. Now you want to click and drag the photo into the Background layer; it will be overlaying it, as seen in Figure 4-9. You can add more layers by clicking on the new button, and then selecting _Add Layer._ [Click here to view a larger image] This will create a new layer and move the current layer down. You can now name this layer something else if you would like. Figure 4-8: Create a new layer in Photoshop by selecting and dragging the image to make the new layer. Figure 4

Talk Now Thomas said that early this year, while working on an assignment at the council, she approached officials to complain about an employee her family had interacted with. She said the employee suggested she had to help straighten her children out because they were "unruly" children. "I was so upset," she said. "I don't need this. I know that. We all know that. Nobody comes here to work, nobody comes here to go to jail. Nobody comes here to live in fear." She said the employee told her she would be reassigned if she continued to speak out. Thomas then reported the alleged harassment. Thomas said someone else spoke to the employee and that the employee apologized but said, "I love my job. I like working here. I like working with children. I like my co-workers. I love the city. I could go anywhere, but I don't want to go.'" Thomas said she has not spoken to the council since the incident. She said she believes that the council does not hold the employee responsible. "This is a woman's life," she said. "The severity of this experience and the way that she has been harassed and abused is very traumatic." According to court documents, the harassment took the form of groping Thomas' breasts. Thomas said there is a culture of harassment at the council and that she had not experienced it since she came to work there. She said if she does try to report harassment in the future, she will have to see a supervisor, the police or the city's Human Resources Department. Assistant City Attorney William P. Clements said he could not comment on pending litigation and that information about pending litigation is confidential. "I am talking to the council, however," he said. "I am sure that there is a lot of concern on their part about any claim that they would have to defend. But until the litigation is concluded, we are not in a position to even discuss the matter." Clements said the city will file a brief in the case. "We will assert as much as we can without jeopardizing any discovery," he said. "We will attempt to pierce any confidentiality you might have."
