The CEO, Arthur Koehler, is aghast when his executives, led by his brother Henry, decide to let one of their three electrical utilities go. Henry, with the help of his crony and new chief of operations Hugh Stanton, plots to replace the contract with the private company that has run the local power plant since 1897. But Arthur stops them and, with the help of his daughter Ellen, creates a plan of his own that will restore the line's profits, and enhance the company's prestige. Koehler manages to save the entire project, but later confronts Henry with the fact that Henry knew nothing of what he was up to, and has decided to resign his position. Koehler threatens to have his wife, Martha, run for a vice presidency at the company. He has certain conditions for Henry's resignation, including that Henry's son Harold end the long friendship between Stanton and Elizabeth (Ellen's younger sister). The unruly child makes it clear that he "has his own mind," and ends the friendship. 648931e174
