The Layers Panel In this book, you find out how to edit the individual color layer settings and create a new layer. Because there's no step-by-step tutorial to show you how to move from one step to the next, I provide a quick tutorial of the process for each of the tools that are used in this book. After you open an image, you see an image window with the Layers panel and Properties window open. To have it open each time you work with the image, go to Window | Layers. I've identified each tool and page in this book using a red star. This means that when you work with a tool, you see the red star after the word. The main window and Layers panel are illustrated in the following figure. Figure 1-2. Photoshop CS5 has a revamped Interface. In this book, you do most of your work in the Layers panel. It's just easier to refer to the panels that are similar to the Layers panel and talk about the tools that are similar to the tools that you see in the Layers panel.

Q: Writing a twig file with several filters
I have a page where a user can submit a tweet with a url like I need to write to a file that gets the the url, checks if it's not taken up, and then return that url. However, that process is going to do more than just checking the url, it's going to have to check the tweet, and then save the tweet (in some model) with the new url. I'd like to write a twig file that returns the url, does some checks and then saves the tweet, but I'm not sure how to do this (and the CMS I'm using doesn't have an easy way to do this either). Basically, I need to do a bunch of database-checking and saving, as well as some preprocessing of the site before the tweet gets uploaded. Is there a way to write a twig file that does this? A: The easiest solution would be to let Twig load the generated markup and then process it inside the template. Something like this would work:

The main benefits of this solution are that the bulk of your code is outside of Twig and it will be executed

Q: Ripple effect on ListView items I have ListView in my App, and I want to have some changes on it's items, I know it is possible to make ripple effect. But I have several items in the list, and every time, when I touch one of the items, the ripple effect affect another item(for example, if there is 1 item, then now I have 2), and I think if I touch next item, the ripple effect changes position, and if I touch the first item, the ripple effect changes 2 items... So my question is how can I have these ripple effects on the items in my list? Thanks. A: What you want to do is to use ripple "on-top" effect for the items of the list. You can achieve this with some help of `android:layout_alignTop="@+id/activity_main"` where `"@+id/activity_main"` is the id of your ListView.
