It never delete the first item of the List. A: No for me, either. I can't duplicate the bug at all. However, there's a reason for why it's 'buggy'. If you try to loop over the first 14 elements (or whatever you started at), you'll get back the first N elements you've accessed. A: Here is a simple solution for that problem: `List list = new ArrayList(); ... // this is just one case for variable defined... final int MAX_ITEMS = 100; for (int i = 0; i < MAX_ITEMS; i++) { list.add("value" + i); }`

Experienced, Professional Tutors Who Are Worth Their Salt You've been told that if you have the right academic background, you can easily go to college, and get a good job. You've been told that in some subjects, you need a degree, and in others, you don't. You've been told that you need a bachelor's degree to be successful, or you need a master's degree to be successful. You've been told that you need a master's degree to get a good job. What if I told you that being able to get a good job doesn't require a degree, but you also need experience, and that experience can be gained in the real world and in the classroom? Experienced, Professional Tutors Who Are Worth Their Salt It's not that there is no need for a bachelor's or master's degree, but that people who have them have the knowledge and depth of knowledge to help students pass tests, do better in college, and pass the GRE exam. How do you find these graduates? There are many websites that list individuals, colleges, and other agencies who provide information about grads and have lists of the best candidates for the best jobs. If you want to find them, you can. How do you find the right candidate? First, you need to find someone who is passionate about what they are teaching, and passionate about helping you succeed. You must find an individual who loves to teach, but you also need to find someone who is capable of reaching out to a student and providing that personal touch that is missing in some of the online programs. They must also be well-trained in the school-based curriculum, although that may not be their priority, and they must be good teachers. One way to find these experienced, professional tutors is to check out tutors who are on National Tutoring Day. This is a great opportunity to find out about these
