Q: Show a message in a unordered list in PHP without using PHP Markdown I have a chat bot that will send a message to a specified users. The message is going to be displayed in an unordered list. I'm using PHP Markdown to insert the message into an unordered list. The problem is that I don't want to display any messages from the bot, but I want to display text directly from the source code that was sent by another user (ex. @MyName sent the message "Hello, are you there?"). I tried setting $message = " but that doesn't work and I got a syntax error. I have tried looking at other answers for this problem and was surprised to find no answers for this issue. Does anyone know of a way to do this? A: You're looking for: echo "$_GET[message]"; Notice the and the $. Giant cytoplasmic inclusions in atypical lymphocytes of the tonsil-associated lymphoid tissue. In a series of 42 cases of lymphomas and lymphoid hyperplasias of the tonsillar area, three cases of possible aggressive B-cell lymphoma were found to be associated with giant cytoplasmic inclusions in the atypical lymphocytes. Review of the literature indicates that the presence of these inclusions in atypical cells of the tonsil-associated lymphoid tissue might be associated with a severe clinical course. Immunocytochemical staining of the cells with the L26 and L27 monoclonal antibodies showed that the inclusions were negative for cytoplasmic IgM and positive for the S and L3 myelomonocytic antigens. These results, in conjunction with the loss of the lymphocyte surface markers d0c515b9f4

Since August when I've been living in California, that is when I see the iconic red-orange sunsets and the intoxicating Californian chill. I have got to catch those sunsets whenever I get a chance to, but when the weather is not so cooperative, I'll embrace the chill. Anyway, I've been craving some creamy, hot chocolate for as long as I can remember, and when friends asked if I want some hot cocoa, I grab the nearest stainless steel pot and flip on the stove! Thankfully, there's a cupboard with a rich selection of cocoa powder, and there I can choose the variety of flavor I want to try. Some are vanilla, some are chocolate, others are cinnamon, and some are even flavored with cinnamon and chocolate. What I like most about the American selection is that they don't add milk powder to my hot chocolate! I'd like to try a milk chocolate one, too. I've always believed that chocolate and cocoa have their best effect when it's served in its purest form, so when I have my hot chocolate, I make sure to use 100% cocoa or a blend of cocoa and chocolate to make sure the flavor is at its best. These days, I'm delighted to find that my favorite chocolate cups have such a wide range of varieties to choose from. I like the retro ones, but I'll pay a premium for the retro-inspired ones like the Snowball. Every cup I buy has a "Satisfaction Guarantee" for me to enjoy it with the first sip. Here's to good memories, good health, and to delicious hot chocolate! I absolutely agree with you about the power of chocolate and cocoa! This is a cuppa I'll indulge in a few more times this week. Thanks for sharing! Marijke (aka Rocket) from Russia February 17, 2015 I am a chocolate lover too! When I read that you prefer 100% cocoa, I think I have to update my list of "best" chocolates! I actually enjoyed it better hot
