Are you the rightful owner of this content? version: 3.2.2.1.1A known case hardening solution contains stannous chloride (SnCl2.2H2O), ammonium chloride (NH4Cl), ferric chloride (FeCl3), formic acid, tartaric acid, water, and natural organic matter. This known case hardening solution provides effective carbon deposition, thereby preventing the occurrence of fire. When placed in a fire extinguisher as a fire protection agent, the above-described known case hardening solution is stored in a stored state mixed with water and other additives. In the stored state, the case hardening solution contains 0.2% stannous chloride, 0.1% formic acid, 0.2% tartaric acid, 25% ammonium chloride, 63% water, and 37% natural organic matter. When released in a fire, the case hardening solution reacts to deposit a carbon film in a fire (see Patent Literature 1). However, it is difficult to apply the above-described known case hardening solution as a fire protection agent in fire extinguishers. This is because it takes a long time to heat up and to react at a fire scene. Further, it is difficult to determine the amount and kind of a
